CAN YOU GUESS.

Here's a Chance to Make
Ten Dollars Easy.

All You Have to Do is Pick the Winners in the Coming Primary.

Just for the interest attached to a guessing contest, and to put a little more interest into the coming campaign for County officers, The News will give its readers a chance to make ten dollars and have a little fun at guessing on the side.

To the person making the first nearest correct guess of the winners in the Democratic Primary Election which will be held in this county on Saturday, June 1st, 1901, The News will present a ten dollar gold piece. The conditions of the contest are simple. Old subscribers and new subscribers who pay $2 on their subscriptions will each be entitled to a guess, and to as many guesses as they pay year's subscription. If no one guesses correctly, the first one who guesses the closest to all the winners will receive the ten dollars.

You intend to pay your subscription anyway, and you may as well pay before the first day of June and have a chance of getting your money back, besides gaining the distinction of knowing more about the political situation than your neighbors.

Each guess will be registered when received as to the exact day, hour and minute. No one will be permitted to see how any one else has guessed. In guessing only the offices on the ballot are to be considered.

Letter From Dr. Roberts.

VESUVIUS AND POMPEII.

Vesuvius has been "smoking her pipe" very calmly for the past few months, in fact unusually so. A visit to Vesuvius is one of great interest, but not without severe fatigue, though one feels fully repaid by the imposing spectacle of the crater and the magnificent panorama of the surrounding environments.

The minerals ejected by the volcano are about fifty in number according to the latest investigations. These minerals are sold by the guides and small boys. The yellow part of the lava is colored with chloride of iron and is sometimes mistaken for sulphur by travelers. There is a railroad now by which you can make the ascent, but when you consider that the height to the upper station is 3,888 feet it is rather trying on those who do not like high places. The length of the railroad is 2,690 feet and has an incline of 50 per cent.

When you reach the upper station you have to walk over great fields of lava, that wind around and have formed in all manner of shapes and forms.
Ten feet from the railroad track we could remove the ashes down a foot and the rock was so hot you could not hold your hand to it. This is three hundred feet from the crater. It is considered very dangerous to approach near the top and only by giving the guide a good fee can this be accomplished. From here we look down upon the ruined city of Pompeii and shudder to think of that memorable day over eighteen hundred years ago when from the month of this crater at our feet, came forth, fire, ashes and lava which buried the city and blotted it and its inhabitants from the face of the earth.

We hasten down to the city of Pompeii or what was Pompeii eighteen hundred years ago. We enter the ancient walls and proceed along the streets paved with stone, which indicate by the debris in the solid blocks, by the wagons and chariots, that at the time of the eruption even the streets were old.
The ruins all indicate that no poor lived here, that this was the abode of the wealthy, in fact a summer resort for the Romans. Cicero had his villa here and it still stands to-day. Many of the houses show that they were structures of wealth by their elegant frescoes, mosaic and decorations of art.

Among the principle houses which the guide, with pride, shows you are the house of Pansa. This is deeply interesting from a political standpoint.
An election was about to come off and placards were posted over the city favoring the different candidates for the Aedileship. Pansa wishing everybody to know how he stood had this inscription painted on his door: "Pansa de-ciden Paratus rogat"—Paratus demands Pansa for Aedile. This and many of the other candidates names are to be seen on the sides of the buildings and public places.

There are many inscription and placards seen all over the city giving notice of plays at the amphitheatre and other places of amusement, now to be seen as plainly as at that time.

The shops and all business done in Pompeii had to have their signs engraved or painted on the door facing; thus, a blacksmith was indicated by wagon springs, hammers, pinchers, iron rings, etc.; a wine shop, by grapes; a milk store, by a goat; physician's office, by surgical instruments. A drug store, by a serpent, etc.

The House of the Tragic Poet is interesting from the fact that Balver represents this as the house of Glaucus in his "Last Days of Pompeii." All the valuable relics have been taken to the museum in Naples, such as jewelry, coins, tools, instruments, lamps, cooking utensils, and, in fact, everything that we have to-day. I examined carefully the surgical and dental instruments and am thoroughly convinced that there is "nothing new under the sun." These people had pumping and all modern sanitary appliances. The old water pipes are still in place and some of them are being used. The eruption occurred in A. D. 79, and therefore forward for seventeen centuries the city disappeared from history—so completely was it buried that its location was lost. In 1748 it was discovered and various Monarchs, one after the other, have at different times proceeded with the work of exhuming.

Only a little over one-third of the city has been brought to light. Five years ago the richest find of all was discovered—the House Vetti. The debris has been carefully removed and the house is in its original form, the court surrounded by its marble pillars, the garden with fountain in center and beautiful statuary. The dining room has beautiful paintings on the walls. It is remarkable that all the colors are preserved in such a perfect state. The work of excavating progresses slowly, as the Italian Government is poor, and their mechanical appliances for removing the earth very crude. The highest price paid for an adult is fifty centimes (10c) per day, the young men and boys get thirteen centimes (2 1/2c) a day and work hard, carrying dirt away in baskets. They have a foreman who sees that they work early and late. A good mule and a cart would move more dirt in an hour in America than these fellows, possibly twenty in number, would in a day.

Soon the day has past and we hurry out of the ancient city, as the shades of night are falling. We wonder if the spirits of those Noblemen of Old hover about the pillars and walls of this "Celebrated City." With old Vesuvius casting her lurid light on the heavens and the ghost-like appearance of the city, we depart hurriedly, feeling glad that we had come and glad that we were going.

KEPT TALLY ON FIBS.

THE ASTONISHING RESULT OF ONLY ONE DAY OF COUNTING.

An Investigator's Discovery of What an Enormous Banquet of the Flowers of Public Admiration the Daily Speech of the Average Mortal.

"Do you know that the average American is a hopeless and incorrigible and unmitigated liar?" said an amateur cynic of Madison street. "I don't mean he lies dishonestly, but he swears mendacitiously of the can yesterday as a sign of a warm day in summer. He does it unconsciously, habitually, automatically—just as his lungs expand and his heart palpitates and his hair grows, without any special attention from the rest of his system. He does it because he can't help it. The thing has become a second nature.

"I had all this brought home to me," continued the amateur cynic, "by a very simple little experiment which I conducted myself and a few others no longer ago than yesterday morning.
Did you ever see a pocket counting machine? Well, it's a little device shaped like a watch. Whenever you press the stem the needle on the dial jumps a point, and it registers in that way up to a thousand on the principle of a cyclometer. They are used by any body making long counts and are very handy, because they never forget where they leave off.

"But, to come to the point, something happened to remind me of our national vice of untruthfulness as I was getting up yesterday, and I determined to 'keep tab' on myself and ascertain, if possible, how many actual, out and out lies I put into circulation in the course of the day. I chanced to have one of the little counting machines mentioned, so I slipped it into my pocket and started by any
they leave off.

"The first lie I told was right at the door. Smithson was passing and stopped to shake hands. 'Hello, old man!' said I. 'Delighted to see you,' when as a matter of fact I was dreading to see him, because I owe him ten. I gave the counter a squeeze and harried on, but before I got to the office I had jogged it nine times.

"What did I jog it for, did you ask?
Oh, trivialities, mere trivialities, but at the same time point blank lies, every one of 'em. Whenever I opened my mouth one lie snatched somehyperbole. I told Jones the joke he invited in springing on me was the 'best I ever heard' and then made a double tally in assuring his wife she was looking remarkably well when she was looking exactly like a scarecrow. I told another friend I never laughed so much in my life as I had at something or other, I don't remember now what, and still another that I hadn't slept a wink for three nights when I had neuralgia lately—all lies, bald lies, in spite of their harmlessness.

"When I reached the office and looked at the dial, I was horrified. 'Good heavens!' I said to myself. 'It seems to be physically impossible for me to speak the plain truth in the plainest matters. I'll just remain perfectly quiet for half an hour and keep check on them.'

"Boggs is our head bookkeeper and a pillar in one of the suburban churches," continued the amateur cynic. "He wears rubber overshoes in wet weather, cultivates sandy side whiskers, carries a gingham umbrella, belongs to a bow and loan association and has all the other marks of severe respectability. I had supposed him to be the quintessence of cast iron veracity, but when I sat down in cold blood to put him on record I was astounded at the lapse of fashion with which he fiddled with the truth. I pushed the button on him 15 times in 27 minutes; then he got into a whispered conversation with a caller, and I lost the thread of his remarks. But I am certain if I had been in earshot the counter would have had hard work keeping up with the production.

"That relieved my mind somewhat, and later on, when I made a quiet test of several of the other fellows in the office, I came to the conclusion that I was no worse than the average, but the average was pretty tough. As far as my investigations went, the invoice clerk held the record. He is a guileless sort of chap, with modest manners and a freckled nose, and I never supposed he had any imagination concealed in his peg topped cranium, but he forced me to push the indicator up exactly 22 times in 15 minutes. During the last part of the stretch, however, he was trying to trade off a secondhand bicycle, and that naturally swelled the returns.

"Of course I soon realized that the idea of keeping count on my own mentality was entirely impractical and abandoned the effort, but the other data has furnished me with abundant food for thought. My brother-in-law, by the way, insists that we would make a great mistake in trying to write these flowers of falsehood out of our daily speech. He says we lie continually and systematically because everybody else lies, and a man who would start out to tell the plain, cold, raw, rectangular truth about everything in life would be little better than an anarchist. He would upset all established standards of value and make it necessary almost to recast the language.
Besides, nobody would believe him.
But my brother-in-law is a doctor," added the amateur cynic thoughtfully, "and maybe that makes a difference."

Verdi and the Critics.

No outsiders, not even members of the press, were allowed to be present at rehearsals of Verdi's opera, "A production of a work of mine," said Verdi, "is an affair between that work and the public. I do not write for the press, but for the public, who will support me if my work is good or who will execute me if it is not. I do not care for night clubs." M. de Nerves thus describes Verdi's attitude at a dress rehearsal of "Otello" in Paris, when the press was present against his wishes:

"The critics were all placed in the corbelle of the amphitheatre, some ten rows of stalls having been cleared away to make room for a table and chairs for Verdi, Bolto and the directors. MM. Sardou, Melhac, Halévy, Ohn, the director of fine arts, and two or three dignitaries and officials of the Opera sat behind in the remaining rows of stalls. Among the critics were MM. Laperre, Brunneau, Jondres, Bel-laigue, Pesard, Cornu and Sarcey.
The foreign press was represented by M. de Biowitz and myself, and as Verdi came in all stood up, with hats off, and cheered the wonderful man. The orchestra joined, of course, in the ovation, and it was not till the music had that the master went, and bowing his reverend head very low, he thanked them for the kind demonstration and shook hands with the nearest, but never once did he turn our way except for one moment, when he took us all in with a side glance, an ugly one—and then for the rest of the evening, some five hours, ignored our presence completely."

Marshall's Absentmindedness.

One day Judge Marshall, engrossed in his reflections, was driving over the wretched road of North Carolina on his way to Raleigh in a stage gig. His horse turned out of the road, and the sulky ran over a sapling and was tilted so as to arouse the judge. When he found that he could move neither to right nor left, an old negro, who had come along, solved the difficulty.

"My old master," he asked, "what fer you don't back your horse?"
"That's true," said the judge, and he acted as advised. Thanking his deliverer heartily, he felt in his pocket for some change, but he did not have any.
"Never mind, old man," he said. "I shall stop at the tavern and leave some money for you with the landlord."

The old negro was not impressed with the stranger, but he called at the tavern and asked the keeper if an old gentleman had left anything there for him.

"Oh, yes," said the landlord. "He left a silver dollar for you. What do you think of that old gentleman?"

The negro gazed at the dollar and said:

"He was a gem'man, for sho', but—" putting his forehead—"He didn't have much in here."—World's Work.

Tough Old English Statesman.

In Macaulay's day English statesmen were of a harder and more robust type than the present race of politicians. They seem to have had cast iron nerves and appetites and diges-tions to match. They dined off a huge beefsteak and a bottle of port, while their grandsons are content with cutlet and a lemon squash. And yet they lived to a good old age. We hear of Lord Brougham at the age of 70 "drinking two bottles of port at dinner, going to bed upon half a bottle of port (whisky) and turning out at daylight to shoot tallies." and Lord Lyndhurst at the age of 90 "supping off hot boiled lobster and champagne."

Mr. Kinnear, an old parliamentary hand, tells us that he remembers ac-knowing "Mr. Disraeli drinking, as the prudent to a big speech, a pint of port wine at the buffet in the commons lobby, dressed in a green coat, a buff waistcoat and snuff colored trousers." This seems a modest potation under the circumstances, but Mr. Kinnear adds that Disraeli came back and had another pint later on.—Blackwood's.

The Wrong Laddie.

A gentleman on a walk from one of the suburbs of Glasgow happened to call at a farmhouse, where he was readily supplied with a glass of milk.
He offered the woman sixpence, but she declined his payment. "I couldn't take money for 't," she said in her own proud way.

The gentleman expressed his acknowledgment and went on his way, but at the garden gate he detected a small boy playing. Surely, he thought, this is the lady's son. So he put his hand in his pocket to give him the sixpence, when he heard a shrill voice.
"That's na me laddie, air." Then there was a pause, and the voice afterward resounded, this time directed toward a small boy at the side door, "Gang out, Wullie, an speak till the nice gentleman at the gate!"—Liverpool Post.

She Couldn't Eat the Coupe.

He had dining with him in the restaurant of the most elegant and fashionable hotel in town his good old maiden aunt from the rural districts.
They had a sumptuous feast, which as it progressed was a series of delightful surprises for the old lady. When they were drinking coffee, the host looked out of the window and noticed it was raining. Turning to the waiter, he said, "I wish you would order me a coupe." Whereupon the maiden aunt raised both her hands in protest, exclaiming: "Don't, Charles, please don't!
I couldn't eat another thing. 'For my word, I'm up to my neck now."—Ex-man, Bridget?"

"Yes, mum."
"I suppose you'll have the same husband."

"Sure, what's that, mum?"
"Oh, he won't give up his club."—

MILLERSBURG, KY.,
March 30, 1901.
EDITOR GAZETTE.
Amid all the bustle, plotting and counter-plotting of the political campaign I have not noticed in your columns any reference to Uncle Sam James, who is running for jailer. I want to tell you right now that if the politicians are fixing up their fences without any reference to this old-time Democratic war horse, they are going to find a good many panels broken down when the votes are counted. There isn't any man in the office that has more warm personal friends than James, and as the Spaniard said about the Americans at San Juan Hill, "They keep coming on." Bourbon County never had a better jailer, and not one of his opponents could fill the place with more satisfaction to the public than he.

We are going to stick to him, because during the bitter days of the reconstruction period directly after the war, and in other campaigns since, he stuck to us, and when the negro was first given the ballot and most of us were thrown into consternation and dismay, he stood at the polls and fought until the sun went down. As a rule, it might be very well to go around over the county and freeze a man out by treating his race as a matter of small consequence, but in this case your Uncle Sammie will be found an exception to the rule. Watch this prediction. On election day his friends will rally to his support, and whoop it up with such vigor and determination that he will land the prize.

Respectfully,
A DEMOCRAT.

Assessment of Candidates.

At a meeting of the Bourbon County Democratic Committee on April 1st, a report was received from the committee appointed to ascertain the cost of the coming primary. It was decided that each candidate for each office be required to pay the following amount:

For Sheriff, $50; for County Judge, $35; for County Clerk, $35; for Assessor, $35; for Representative, $30; for County Attorney, $30; for Jailor, $15; for School Superintendent, $5; for Coroner, $5; for Surveyor, $5; for Magistrate, $1; for Constable, $1.

These sums must be paid to Russell Mann, Treasurer of the Committee, by 12 o'clock noon, May 1st, and each candidate must give his name to Secretary Lyt Purnell, in order that his name may appear on the ballot. The Committee adjourned to meet on May 1st, at 2 o'clock p. m.

ASSESSOR ROBERT L. BAKER, of Fayette, has prepared a summary giving the total value of all the taxable property in Fayette county, which shows an increase over that of the year previous and shows Fayette to be the second county in point of wealth in the State of Kentucky.

STORIES OF THE STAGE.

Coming Attractions, Gossip in the Lobby and Boxes.

"ARIZONA."

At the opera house on Monday, April 15th, will be presented Mr. Augustus Thomas' charming play "Arizona." This piece, which has been pronounced by critics in the larger cities of the East a play for Americans by an American, is about doubt the best dramatic creation which the public has seen for years. "Arizona" has the distinction of having had one of the most successful runs in the history of the American drama. It had a run of three months at the Chicago Opera House last summer, three months at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, and five months at the Herald Square Theatre, New York City.

Messrs. LaSalle & Hamlin, the owners and managers of the "Arizona" company, have equipped a first-class organization to make a tour of the other cities of the United States. They have engaged a first-class company of players and have had built expressly for this production a car load of scenery, painted by the most eminent artists from the original scenes from which the play is taken. "Arizona" is replete with comedy, pathos and heart interest which will move the most stolid audience to tears. Among the principal people engaged for this production are Mr. John W. Cope (Carlyle the Ranchman), Fraser Conlter (Colonel Bonham), Brandon Hurst (Capt. Hognan), Lionel Barrymore (Lieut. Denton), Grace Thorne (Estrella Bonham), Eleanor Wilton (Mrs. Canby), Carrie Reynolds (Lena Keller), and numerous others selected especially for their qualifications for the characters which they assume.

Incidental to the action of the play are introduced members of the Eleventh U. S. C. cow punchers, vapers, etc. As this will be the only visit of "Arizona" to Paris this season, all theatregoers should grasp the opportunity to see the forthcoming production.

A love letter of Prince Blamires. On my window sill, among all sorts of crocuses and hyacinths, stand two camellias which always inspire me with strange thoughts. One of them, slender and pretty, with its ornamental crown (top) and soft, pale-very pale-pink blossoms, but little foliage, and only two buds, transports me to Reddeth, holds itself rather stiffly and lops English. The other makes far less impression of beauty as you look at it, and its stalk betrays in its gnarled (withered) lack of care in its pruning. From the midst of the foliage looks out a dead branch, but the crown is rich in leaves, and the foliage is greener than that of its neighbor. It gives promise of abundant blossoming in its eight buds, and its color is deep dark red and white in irregular gay variegation. Do you take the comparison amiss? It is a lame comparison, moreover, for I do not love camellias, because they are without odor, and you I love precisely on account of the fragrance of the flower of your spirit, which is white, dark red and black.

Two clerks named Thomas and Clarence were in the employ of a wealthy merchant. Thomas was always an industrious lad, but Clarence was much given to idleness and was extravagant in his habits. In after years Clarence married his employer's daughter and was made a partner in the business. Thomas continued to be an honest, industrious clerk all his life, and his services were much appreciated by Clarence and his father-in-law.

A QUOTE FROM.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature,—rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, friends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the deaths resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Doan's German Syrup kept about your home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill; and perhaps death, by the use of the same. For curing Consumption, Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Duncan And The Ducks.

One day this week Duncan Bell put on his hunting suit and, with his trusty brooch leader sallied forth in quest of wild ducks. Luck seemed to be with him, for he had not gone over a quarter of a mile up the creek before his eagle eye detected three large mallards gracefully swimming about upon the bosom of Stoner. Hastening to the nearest farm house he telephoned to town to have all traffic stopped and not allow the town clock to strike.

Returning to within a hundred yards of the ducks, he got down upon all fours and stealthily commenced to crawl up on his prey. After a half hour's tedious crawling he managed to get within shooting distance without alarming them. Taking careful and determined aim, he fired, and killed two out of the three, the other one being wounded so it could not fly away.

But here comes the sequel: Before the smoke had cleared away an irate old lady in the person of Mrs. Sullivan bore down upon him, exclaiming: "You spalpeen, what do you mean by killing my ducks?"

"Your ducks, madam! They are wild ducks and belong to the hunter."

"Wild ducks, is it. Sure I raised every blessed one of them from a little duck-let."

It took three dollars of Duncan's coin to repair the damage done, and he has sold his gun and put it away for the summer.

The many friends of this couple will unite with the couple in wishing them a merry time on their anniversary and that they may continue to enjoy the blessings of health and happiness for many years to come.

By an act of Congress whenever the postal receipts reach $10,000 it entitles the city to the benefits of a free delivery.

Paris has gone beyond that by over $500, and all that is necessary now is for a little push on the part of the Commercial Club and we will have it.
